

08/836,769

- 13 -

Abstract

The invention relates to a device for temperature measurement. The heat radiation emanating from a measurement spot on an object of measurement is imaged by an optical system onto a detector. A sighting arrangement is also provided which has a diffractive optical system by which a light intensity distribution is produced which corresponds to the position and size of the measurement spot on the object of measurement.

08836769 102097